INDIANA SAVING MILLIONS UNDER STATE TAX PLAN

Amounts to $36,500,000 in Seven-Year Period, It Is Estimated by People

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Taxpayers of Indiana are counting themselves $36,500,000 richer at the end of a seven-year period of control of governmental expenditures by a State Board of Review.

Full credit is given to a state law of 1921 which gave the State Board of Tax Commissioners, until then merely an assessment equalization body, authority to pass on public bond issues, annual tax levies and proposed budget expenditures.

The Indiana Tax Plan, as the ex-penditure control system is known and widely referred to by economists and students of taxation, has attracted attention of officials of for-eign as well as domestic governmental bodies. It applies the simple theory of requiring taxing units "live within their income."

Control lies within the power of a single state board which has authority, on petition of 10 or more taxpayers, to review a taxing unit's proposed levy, proposed expenditure items of its budget and bond issues for schools, bridges, and other public improvements.

Reductions ordered by the central review board in 367 taxing units on requested budget expenditures, and resulting tax levies, have amounted to $13,499,725 since 1921, according to estimates by the Indiana Taxpay CAIRO-Nahas Pasha, at a confer- ers Association. In the same period appeals by taxpayers to the central board resulted in disapproval being voted to road, bridge and school bond issues amounting to more than $23,-

Increasing Use of Plan Since 1921, increasing use has been made by taxpayers' groups of the appeal provisions of the Indiana Tax Plan. From 42 appeals filed in 1921 Having lengthily summarized the number annually has increased until in 1927 the number of taxing units from which appeals were taken numbered 136.

Government Statement Is Made in the British House of Commons

PRICES SLUMP ON THE LONDON MARKET

New Order of Things Is to Go Into Effect on November 1

BY CABLE FROM MONITOR BURBAU LONDON-Stanley Baldwin, the Prime Minister, in the House of Commons this afternoon announced that all restrictions on rubber production under the Stevenson Act would be removed on Nov. 1, next the existing regulations continuing in force until then. Mr. Baldwin's announcement to erminate all the restrictions on rubber exports under the modified Stevenson scheme, which has been in operation since 1922, completely upset the market, prices dropping 21/2d. within an hour. The decision was based on the report of the committee on civil research. The latter has been studying for the last several months the operation of the effects of the temporary restrictions on the export from certain territories within he British Empire. The seven months which must elapse before the restriction ceases is expected to adjust the market to the resumption of the old conditions. Until Nov. 1, therefore, there will be no free export of rubber, and consequently no immediate glut through a severe fall in prices. The directors and shareholders of the 600 rubber companies in London are said to have lost £7,000,000 as the result of the Government's decision "to throw the rubber plantation industry into the melting pot of the committee on civil

Wall Street Benefited

The loss is attributed to the official Downing Street announcement late on the afternbon of Wednesday, Feb. 8, after the London market had closed, which enabled Wall Street operators still trading to real:

Predictions were freely made by the pro-Stevenson advocates that if it were removed within the next six months rubber would fall to 8d., pos-sibly 6d. per pound as it did in 1922. At such price, it was said half, if not two-thirds of the rubber companies would be forced to abandon the estates. The actual cost of produce tion is now estimated at 6d. to 1s. original Stevenson scheme six years ago and the reason for its success were that it aimed at restricting the uneconomic sale of rubber at a price

Reason for Failure The chief flaw in the present scheme and the reason for its failure said to be that it aims at fixing an uneconomic price for rubber by which successful competition is encouraged, namely, by the recovery of old rubber, the extension of foreign estates, and financing the rivals of British producers. What proved useful as a defensive expedient, said one of the critics, has apparently become a "dangerous instrument for the inflating of prices. The broad effect of the restrictions has been to present the Dutch plantation and native-grown rub-ber with an advantage of higher price and unlimited ountut, so that the share of the British-owned esto one-half the total of the world where the price slumped 2%d. to 10% per pound for spot and May delivery. June was quoted at 10% d. and July and December at 11d. per pound. Replying to questions, the Premier said that there would be debate on the matter and that full information would be given to the House.

Rubber Prices Slump The Premier's announcement had a moralizing effect in Mincing Lane

Asked whether the new situation required the sanction of the House of Commons, Mr. Baldwin replied that he would like notice of the ques-tion but that he thought it could be done by order of the Colonial Office. Neil MacLean, Laborite, thereupon closing prices of 27.70c. The rubber trade apparently had been expecting removal or modification of rubber export restrictions, but it was thought that any change would be made gradually over one or two years at least. Mr. Baldwin's announcement in Parliament that it had been decided to remove all restrictions on Nov. 1 consequently took operators by surprise. There was a general rush to sell during the first hour, and what little buying appeared came chiefly from traders who had sold at higher levels and wished to cover. The demand was insufficient to absorb the extensive offerings by domestic and foreign interests. Mr. Baldwin's an-nouncement is regarded here as bringing to an end, at least for the present, the effort of the British rubber trade to control world rubber prices. Export restrictions were established under the legislative au thority of the Stevenson act in 1922 with the idea of holding prices to a level insuring profits to British rubber operators, who then handled most of the world's supply, with the United States the biggest buyer.

Fluctuations of Prices Prices subsequently experienced pound. American manufacturers, believing that the restrictions not only would continue to raise prices, but actually threaten this country's supply: immediately took action to combat the British scheme. One result of their efforts was organization of the national reserve for crude rubber, or American "rubber pool," bought some 65,000 tons of rubber to hold as a reserve and apparently succeeded to a great degree in sta-bilizing prices, for last year fluctua-

Methods of reclaiming rubber were improved and the output enormously increased, assuring a further supply of rubber for certain purposes, chief among them lower-priced tires. The United States Rubber, Firestone, and Ford interests purchased rubber plantations abroad and expanded programs of cultivation and production. Prices at noon still were just under 5 cents a pound below yesterday's closing quotations, but the tone was a bit firmer. At one time prices of all active positions had declined more than 5 cents, with September reaching the extreme low a 22:10 cents a pound, as compared with 27.70 at the close yesterday. The decline represented the greatest swing in prices since March 10, 1926, when quotations rose nearly 6 cents a pound on reports of increased consumption.

Traders crowded the ring, excitedly trying to sell, and in the first hour 3,597½ long tons or more than $2,000,000 worth of rubber, changed hands, a new trading record. The previous record, 2715 tons, was established March 19.

CUT-RATE BOOK SALES OPPOSED

Prices Sliced in Half by Department Stores Stir Booksellers to Act

NEW YORK—An effort is being made by the American Booksellers' Association, of which John G. Kidd of Cincinnati is president, to end price cutting on books which, Mr. Kidd says, is threatening to put the retail bookseller out of business. It is said that several large department stores are selling books at prices which make it impossible for the book stores to compete.

Mr. Kidd has just come to New York to confer with some of the members of the association to determine what can be done to meet the situation. It was said that in some department stores the price cutting has led to selling most of the "best sellers" actually below wholesale

Faced by this competition; as well as by cut-rate mail order houses, book guides and clubs, the independent retail dealer is facing extinction, according to Mr. Kidd. This statement was backed up by E. W. Meyer, executive secretary of the booksell-

The current issue of the Publish-The current issue of the Publishers' Weekly sets forth the price-cutting by printing a list showing how some "best sellers" have been reduced in price. This shows "Trader-Horn" selling, cut-rate, at $1.89. The regular retail price is $4 and dealers pay $2.40 in lots of 100. The bookshop price of Emil Ludwig's "Bismarck" is $5: the cut-rate price $3.33. Ludwig's "Napoleon" retails at bookshops at $3, but department stores have it at $1.58. GAS is rapidly becoming the fuel of the nation. During the past twentyfive years while the population of the United States has increased 50% the sale of manufactured gas has increased seven times as fast—or 352%. For more than a century the gas industry has gone ahead quietly and steadilyinventing, perfecting and producing. Today it is realized more than ever that gas offers many conveniences to our comfort and well-being, not alone in the home but in fall industrial and commercial fields as well.

In the majority of American homes gas is performing services that spell the difference between toil and comfort . . . confinement and leisure. More and more are recognized the unsurpassed facilities that gas offers for cooking, water heating, home heating, incineration and refrigeration. Gas has been found to be a fuel entirely free from inconveniences clean, always available, adequate, requiring a minimum of attention, no storage or handling.

The gas industry is highly appreciative of its obligations to serve you in every possible way. It maintains laboratories for the testing of processes and appliances - that your interests may be safeguarded. It recommends the most efficient and economical equipment for the use of gas for whatever purpose you need it in your home.

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BURRAU WASHINGTON - The fifth trial growing out of the naval oil land leases given by Albert B. Fall, formerly Secretary of Interior, got man under way long enough for the court ton. to grant the defense a continuance of five days.

That trial was abruptly ended when the Government charged jury tampering by Mr. Sinclair. As a result of these charges and following an extended inquiry by Justice F. R. Statute of Limitations Changed

At this pession of Congress Thomas Walsh (D.), Senator from Monchief investigator of the oil land leases, obtained the enactment of an act reducing the statute of limitations and thereby making it possible for Mr. Everhart to testify without fear of legal proceedings

Following the passage of this law he was called before the Senate Pub-lic Lands Committee and questioned by Mr. Walsh. He informed the committee that he was directed by Mr. Fall to call on Mr. Sinclair in his private railroad car in Washington, and that when he did so the latter gave him $230,000 in Liberty bonds for Mr. Fall. He also testified that several days later he obtained in New York an additional $60,000 from in Texas, Committeeman Says Mr. Sinclair for Mr. Fall. Mexico to Repay Lindbergh Visit

Popular Subscription Buys Airplane for Return Flight to Be Made in April

PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR MEXICO CITY-Mexico is to repay the good-will visit of Colonel Lindbergh, Ever since the Spirit of St. Louis landed at Valbuena Field there has been a widespread desire to show appreciation of that gesture of friendship by a return visit. But there have been obstacles, Mexico had pilots, good ones; had airplanes, not so good. Excelsior, one of Mexico's two leading dailies, solved the problem. A public sub-scription to buy a plane was announced through the newspaper's columns. The money was speedily oversubscribed and the flight will be made in April.

By coincidence, Capt. Emilio Car-ranza, a nephew of President Car-ranza and friend of Colonel Lind-bergh, has been selected to pilot the plane, which has been named Mexico-Excelsior. The machine is a Ryan monoplane, an exact duplicate of the Spirit of St. Louis. Captain Carranza, who speaks

English, set a Mexican nonstop flight record last summer, flying between Juarez, on the border, and Mexico

CITIES TO FACE NEW PROBLEM IN PLANE HANDLING

B5-Square Mile Area Needed in New York, Says Report -Others in Proportion

NEW YORK — Unless invention eliminates the necessity of long runways for airplane take-off and landings, some 35 square miles of airports will be needed for the future use of New York, and in other cities in the United States in propor-This is the estimate of E. P. Go rich, consulting engineer who has just released his report on "airports as a part of the city planning" through the National Municipal League of New York. Rounded Dome Field Best "Devices are sure to be developed, however, to assist in taking off and landing," declared Mr. Goodrich, earlier in his report. "The compressed air catapult employed for sand on the decks of airplane tenders are present examples. "But perhaps the simplest scheme of all is to form the surface of the anding field like a flat dome with the depot at the center of the top. Approaching planes would land up the incline, being assisted in stopping by the force of gravity, while departing carriers would leave by sliding down the slope with the as-sistance of gravity as Lindbergh did on his start to France, and as Byrd did on his hop to the North Pole."

In arriving at his estimates Mr. Goodrich worked in maximums. The limiting factor in the development of air carriage, he figured, will prob-ably be the number of pilots. Not more than 10 per cent of the populato guide safely a vehicle which can move in three dimensions, he said.

Thus, assuming a population of 200,- Newson.

000 planes being in the air at the same time in the United States. Roof Landings Not Feasible

After a considerable mathematical process it was estimated that at the outside figure a landing space will Turn Out With Pick and be needed, at some time in the fu-ture, for each 2000 persons. By using a circular field with a diameter of 7500 feet, Mr. Goodrich stated, there would be room for handling 44 planes simultaneously. With the reduction of the estimated 10-minute intervals for landing, and with the development of planes requiring less runway, he estimated, such a field do for 450,000 persons. Even so, New York City would require 35 square miles of airports. "Much talk has been heard about cause flying over cities involves ex-tra hazards for both plane and city, roofs are not likely to come into very extensive use for landing purposes.

"It is more than possible, in fact that approach routes to airports will some day be fully cleared, so that air transport routes traverse country so prepared that emergency airplane landings will be possible at any point along the route, instead of only at emergency fields, located perhaps five miles apart." launching naval planes, and the de-celeration cables which drag bags

The absence of such records, however, makes it impossible to trace noticeable in dipping into the histhe transition of speculative into tory of Freemasonry is to find how operative Masonry. Scottish lodges ancient are some of the "modern have taken more care with their min- customs." For instance, community utes and there are in existence rec- singing was a feature of Masonic acords which show that away back in tivities in the early eighteenth centives were admitted into the operative lodges, paying double initiation fees and dues and being entered on the books as "geometrical masons." It seems almost certain that about the same time there was in existence, though the date of its foundation is not known, at Warrington, a lodge composed entirely of men of means and leisure, into which the famous antiquarian, Elias Ashmole, was admitted. Five years previously a noted scholar, Robert Moray, the founder of the Royal Society, then an army officer, had been initiated at New-castle-upon-Tyne, but this ceremony which he was an officer.

The problem, to which Albert F. Calvert, notably, has devoted many years of patient and arduous research, is why the Grand Lodge of England, formed in 1717, as it was undoubtedly, by men drawn entirely from the working classes, should yet from the working classes, should yet, within a year, blossom forth with its personnel entirely changed. The founders of the Grand Lodge were in the collection of dues than do in the collection of dues than do not operative masons, but they were all working men, carpenters, brick-layers and the like and, although the quently, when the arrears became occupation of Anthony Sayer, the large, a compromise was effected, first Grand Master, is not known, it half the sum due, or even less, beis evident that he could not be de-scribed by that misleading term The collection of these arrears has "gentleman."

There also appeared upon the stage a crowd of actors, every one of whom was a nower in the life. one of whom was a power in the lit-erary, scientific, and social life of the day. There was Desaguliers, D. C. L. of Oxford, the son of a clergyman and himself a clergyman, the most active member of the Royal Society; James Anderson, who, notwithstanding his excursions into fiction and imagination was a learned member and an analysis of a church service or at a stone-laying ceremonial. Such Matter and the stone-laying ceremonial. tion, was a learned man and an able Presbyterian minister; the Duke of Montagu, the first noble Grand Master, appointed to that office in 1721, also a Fellow of the Royal So-clety; and a host of supernumeraries. among whom may be mentioned Lord Paisley, Sir Richard Manningham, the Duke of Richmond, the Duke of Queensberry, William Cowper, Mar-tin Folkes, Lord Carpenter, all Fel-lows of the Royal Society.

What attracted these and other scholars, far too numerous to specify, to Freemasonry so early in its history as an organization? The answer is still lacking, but a clue to answer is still lacking, but a clue to the solution of the problem has been supplied in a valuable contribution to Masonic history which has just been made by Dr. A. W. Oxford, in his History of the Royal Somerset House and Inverness Lodge, which has descended from one of the four

Every member of the Somerset House Lodge, the unit in question, as far as can be ascertained, was a man of position, wealth, and eminence. It was to this lodge that There are very few all the distinguished Freemasons whose names have been cited, be longed. One interesting feature which is were admitted into the opera-numerous glee books which were collated and sold for this purpose, some exclusively Masonic. Very shortly sprang up the custom of initiating free of charge and electing as hon-orary members of lodges, prominent musicians, presumably for the purpose of conducting the harmony of the lodges, and they were paid for their services. Some of the musicians thus elected were Benjamin Cooke, doctor of music and organist of Westminster Abbey; John Braham a famous tenor of the time; John Bernard Sale, organist of the Chapel Royal; and a host of others. Public Masonic processions in England are now a thing of the past. Brethren are not permitted by Grand this, as a rule, is granted only on the occasion of a church service or at a stone-laying ceremonial. Such Masonic processions, however, take place very frequently in Scotland and even in Ireland, and at one time they were very common on both the St. John's Days in England. In Scotland today, on St. John's Day in winter, they invariably include a torchlight procession in the program as well as procession in the program as well as the inevitable dinner.

OFFICER GUILTY OF CRITICIZING HIS SUPERIOR

British Naval Court-Martial Ends in Accused Being Dismissed His Ship

GIBRALTAR (AP)-Commander H M. Daniel was found guilty by court-martial today of actions prejudicial to discipline growing out of the famous Royal Oak affair at Malta.

The commander was found guilty on all charges including reading publicly in the wardroom of the Royal Oak certain remarks subversive of naval discipline and of reading re marks and criticisms on the conduct and orders of his superior officer, Rear Admiral Bernard St. G. Collard, calculated to bring the latter into contempt.

Capt. Kenneth G. B. Dewar, also of the Royal Oak, is scheduled to face similar charges.

The trial opened aboard the air-plane carrier Eagle on Saturday and detailed testimony was introduced telling of incidents aboard the Royal Oak which formed the background of a controversy between Admiral Collard and the other two officers Extensive testimony was introduced concerning a dance aboard the bat-tleship during which the admiral was declared to have berated the bandmaster and to have referred to m with an opprobrious epithet.

Admiral's Conduct Blamed

The defense, which was headed by Day Kimball, former Assistant Attorney-General of Massachusetts and now a British barrister, contended that the admiral's actions were such as to interfere seriously with the morale of the crew, since the admiral rebuked the bandmaster and even Commander Daniel in the presense of other officers and members of the crew.

Testimony for the defense closed this morning, and after a short adjournment, Mr. Kimball delivered his plea in behalf of the commander. The cution then followed, contending that the charges of actions subversive to discipline by Commander Daniel in reading the letter in the

During the testimony incidents of the dance on board the Royal Oak were recalled by Major Atwood, commanding the Marine battalion and formerly of the staff of Rear-Admiral Collard. Major Atwood had just finished dancing, he said, when upon looking around he saw the Rear-Admiral shaking his fist at the band and talking loudly. Commander Daniel spoke to the Rear-Admiral, the witness said. Then both officers walked away while everybody stared at them

Reflection on the Marines

The witness said he told Com-mander Daniel later that he wished to protest against what he considered reflection on the Marines, but he was willing to leave the matter en tirely in the hands of Captain Dewar The incident was distinctly discouraging to the band, the witness said and it made the members indignant. Major Atwood said Commander Dan-iel told the officers in the wardroom that the band incident was closed and was not to be referred to again. The witness said it was a fair state-ment to make with reference to the unpleasant scene on the Royal Oak to say that all the officers who had the mortifying experience of witnessing it were inflamed with indignation and were deeply resentful. There seemed to be a certain feeling in the wardroom, he added, that if some-thing were not done there would be trouble on the ship.

Commander Daniel was sentenced to be dismissed from his ship and to be severely reprimanded.

There was a solemn scene when the court reopened this afternoon for announcement of the decision. When Commander Daniel entered he found his sword lying on the table with the hilt toward the president of the court. This gave positive indication that he had been found guilty on at least one count, as otherwise the hilt would have been toward the defendant, who again would be privileged to grasp it.

The assemblage, however, was not left long in doubt concerning the full fund. decision, as the judge advocate, when all was quiet, solemnly delivered the verdict amid intense silence.

The sentence on the commander implies dismissal from his ship, but not from the service. He will remain on half pay until it pleases the Ad-miralty to appoint him to another ship or another post.

The long thin sticks that seemed of "The Sky Has Tumbled," Reported the Bronze-Hued lass and yet turned to water were indeed unfathomably mysterious to the darkies. They roared with mirth when the chilly stuff which lay in their horny hands suddenly and magically disappeared. In one respect the Bantu proved superior to the white man during Siberian weather. Barefooted he walked through snowdrifts without the slightest fear. Kaffir skin is incredibly tough. I have seen a black domestic calmly lift several glowing coals out of an open fire with his fingers and very deliberately place the incandescent parcels on the ground. The smallest umfaan thought nothing of walking over frozen ice on his bare soles. But a number of savages took fire-buckets into their huts for the sake of warmth.

Not Equipped for Ikapoki

Nobody in Africa liked "ikapoki." few Basuto tribesmen up the lofty Drakensberg mountains were used to it, but otherwise, to quote an American traveler, "It's not right and proper to find Africa's sunny fountains frozen hard."

its largest volume through co-operation of taxpayers with the when budget requests in 75 taxing units were reduced by $4,605,886. It was the first year that tax levy reductions had totaled as much or more than $2,000,000.

Strength was given the tax control plan by the 1927 legislature through amendment of the budget law adding to it penalties for ap-plication of funds appropriated for specific purposes in a budget to other purposes. In other words, the township, county or city taxing unit's budget, instead of being a vehicle for estimating a tax levy alone, be-came, in fact, an ironclad appropriation bill, funds in which no longer were interchangeable and subject to transfers for making up deficits or for reduction of excess appropria-

No Budget Padding

This strengthened budget law has the middle of a hothouse. Climbing the State to become more keenly its slopes the few wanderers who alert to their responsibilities, and old practices of padding budget estinates are fast disappearing.

Operation of the central review ard's authority over bond issues has caused timidity in the ranks of contractors who formerly sought public contracts through political favor and other means. The review board insists that all contracts shall be awarded to the low bidder if he is responsible.

The one criticism of the Indiana tax control plan heard is that it robs the local communities of "home rule" as to expenditure of their own tax revenues. But repeated attempts to fore, instinctively took up snowball- abrogate the law and reduce the authority of the tax board have met with failure. Popular majority opinion admits the worth of the tax control method.

Airica Felix Eritrea is a remarkable product of colonization and entirely different from other neighboring colonies of other empires. It is not an example of the colony which only awaited modern development to become a paying concern. It lacks water; its duce is won by the ingenuity of uman contrivance, competing with the local inhospitality of nature. But despite its slow returns. Eritrea is Africa Felix. There is a virility about it which is almost unknown among other more prosperous neighbors. It has, on the Asmara plateau, a climate which has made the capital a typical Italian hill village 4000 fest summer resort for the less favorably dah. But the great feature of Asmara is the market where all. Italians, Arabs and Abyssinians alike, congregate in the broiling sun to buy and sell. The main trades are in hides from the fastnesses of Abyssinia, in dates and hay from the plains and in grain from the settlers' farms. All merchandise comes to market by road, borne by legions of donkeys and camels, and all native transactions are in the surprising 1780 currency of Maria Theresa of Austria. It is bewildering to think of a con-servatism which will not accept other token than the fat handsome silver dollar, stamped with the aristocratic profile of the mother of Marie Antoinette of France. And it is diverting to see the seller testing every coin tendered in payment. The agreed test of genuineness is to count the number of jewels in the Imperial Crown and to insure that the Empress wears on her shoulder the Star of the House of Hapsburg.

Peaks Never Yet Scaled It was the Prince's first experience of the wildness and grandeur of Eritrean mountain scenery. Far be-low, in the wadis which in the rainy season are roaring torrents, strings of camels were plodding to the markets of Asmara with their loads of the initiative of President Coolidge, hay, palmwood and dates from plains supported in particular by Germany. A-B-C POWER SUPPLY UNIT IS DESCRIBED

Flexible Unit Designed for Sets Using 226 and 227 Tubes

This is a "Hose-to-Build" article by Perry Graffam describing one of the new types of units now on the market for use with harnesses for converting the old type D. C. set into the new A. C. style.

A. C. adapter harnesses are holding the center of the radio stage at the present time as they make it possible to convert one's tuned R. F. set into a modern A. C. tube job without any changes in wiring. An excellent harness is the Carter, designed for use with an A. C. filament transformer which gives the three voltages common to the 26 and 27 type of tube including the power tube, 11/2, 21/2, and 5 volts.

As long as we are going into the elimination of the A battery, why not combine this with a B eliminator and make a single job for the com-plete electrification of the set without various separate units, all re-quiring individual leads? This latter supply and if the meter used is 0-5 supply unit which does exactly the pole switch. above, a complete A, B and C eliminator to work with the 26 and 27 three filament lighting taps. Such a unit can be used with the Carter Harness or one can rewire his set voltages required.

and use this unit. cial production practice forbids the served. incorporation of such features.

Working along these lines a means is supplied for controlling the various filament voltages by the connection for line voltage fluctuation on the input side of the filament transformer. This is accomplished with a power Clarostat which is connected across the primary of this transformer. Any line voltage fluctuation may thus be compensated for and the filaments will receive the exact voltage they require.

On the National main power transformer used in this supply unit, two filament lighting taps are left unfalled.

After the A. C. has been stepped up to a high voltage by the transformer the current is rectified into direct current by a Raytheon BH A certain amount of A. C. ripple still exists after rectification takes place and this is ironed out by the chokes, coils and Tobe condenser

We now have a source of high voltage and need only make arrangements for tapping off at the points where certain voltages are desired. This is obtained through a series of Clarostats and a fixed resistance.

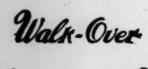

An important point is the main-tenance of the R. F. voltage at a given point and this is insured by use of a Raytheon regulator tube, or a UX-874 or CX-374. When the latter type of tube is used the 50,000-ohm Veritas resistance shown in the diameter. gram by a dotted line arrangement made to one of the mounting screws on the socket, the actual contact with the brass pin on the side of the tube being achieved by fastening a piece of spring on this socket mounting screw so that it will press against the pin when the tube is inserted in the socket.

The Jewell D. C. voltmeter is con The Jewell D. C. voltmeter is controlled by a switch so that it may be thrown in or out of the circuit as the reader may desire. This switch is so arranged that it permits a correct reading on either the 1½ or 2½-volt lines, the voltage being con-trolled by the power Clarostat as described earlier in this article.

To build the power supply, obtain the material as listed below and secure a piece of smooth board 11x14 inches for the sub-base. The wiring of the unit is made easier with the aid of Acme flexible Celatsite wire, which comes in various colors, (red, black, yellow, salmon, green, blue, etc.). The leads from the filament supply transformer should be paired and twisted to-gether. Choose a different color for the 1.5 volt, 2.5 volts, etc. In this way any connection can be easily verified The leads from the "B" supply ter-minals to sub-base may all be bunched together and then sewed into a small cable with No. 6 waxed linen cord. BRITAIN TO AID LOYAL MOSLEMS IN DESERT WAR

Mandates to Be Protected From Incursions of Fanatical Tribesmen

By MARC T. GREENE declaration of sympathy with the warring Wahabis, together with the fact that Feisal ed Dawish's tribesmen have been as close to Basrah this return. as 40 miles and are now threatening the little neighboring independent state of Koweit, have caused much neasiness here.

All this tends to confirm the opinion that Saud has all the time been sympathetic to Feisal and the other esert sheiks, even if not actually in league with them. In a recent declaration to the chief sheiks of the tribe of the Nejd desert at of the state on the Persian Gulf, and

Its publication has little doubt as to its authenticity to the effect that Ihn Saud has already supplied the tribesmen with the promised rifles, tents, ammunition and food which, with his great wealth, he is easily able to do to almost any extent. Having received this aid, the sheiks have returned to prepare advances against Irak, Transjordan and Koweit.

Treaty Apparently Broken This declaration appears to abrogate altogether the Treaty of Jiddah so far as Saud is concerned. By this treaty, which was concluded only last September, King Ibn Saud agreed, among other things, to respect the sovereignity of Koweit, on the Persian Gulf, and Yamen, south of Hejaz on the Red Sea. These states are under the independent rule

British subjects who might be in the Hejaz or the Nejd, and to make no distinctions between Moslem pligrims or residents, whatever their differences of Mohammedan doctrine. In return the British Government agreed to respect the rights of natives of the Hejaz, who might be in British Territory, and to observe the British Territory, and to observe the sovereignty of Saud over the Hejaz and the Nejd.

For six months Saud has been pretending to observe his side of this agreement, but it is logical that he should support these sheiks. He is the supreme head of the Wahabi people, who are the "fundamental" Moslems. The Moslems of Irak and Kowelt have strayed from the arriter. BASRAH, Irak—King Ibn Saud's of the ancient faith and must, it is held, be recalled, by the sword, if necessary. And the Wahabis, who are fanatically courageous warriors, are quite powerful enough to compel

Nation of Houses Tolerated During Shortage

Outstanding achievements in better housing and some novel trends in architecture in Europe and the United States are being reported for THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR in a series of daily articles, of which the following is the ninth.

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU LONDON-When the World War opened, the British Nation was on the verge of a nation-wide campaign against the slum. Each of the great political parties had prepared a national program, and had published volumes expressing its views, and the statistics on which its proposed policies were based. It was generally accepted that upward of 5,000,000 people were living under conditions of insanitation and overcrowding.

Possibly one of the most enlightening of the war's experiences to many negligent, well-to-do, but sin-cerely patriotic people, was the shame experienced when they realized that was necessary to call hundreds of housands of men to the Nation's service from homes not worth fight ing for. It was also found that, at a time when an A1 population was It was in those hours of trial that politicians in a fine fervor declared that at the close of the war it would

236,000 houses should be built. The problem is even greater in volume in England and Wales, because the population is much larger. There are 1,000,000 houses unfit for habitation. There is a stern feeling among many British housing reformers that the slum problem was "played with" in pre-war years, and that it is high time a great concentration of national endeavor, accompanied by some measure of sacrifice, should be secured to insure better conditions secured to insure better conditions

Three world's records, making a total of four for the tourney, were established last night. The I. A. C. 400established last night. The I. A. C. 400-yard relay team sped to a mark of 3m. 32.6s., an improvement of 5.4 seconds over the record set in 1925 by the Cincinnati Central Y. M. C. A. The I. A. C. sent a fifth man into the water to continue to 500 yards, taking 12.4 seconds from the old mark by finishing in 4m. 28.2s. The swimmers were John Weismuller, P. C. Samson, Robert Hallaran, and H. J. Miller, and the fifth man was J. M. Dithmer, former Purdue University star.

An upset in more ways than one occurred in the low springboard diving championship. Harold D. Smith of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, previously Los Angeles Athletic Club, previously practically unknown, dethroned the champion, Farid Simaika of Los Angeles, former Egyptian. M. G. Riley of the Los Angeles club was performing brilliantly and was said to be way out in front on points when a remark by a spectator distracted his attention and he slipped from the board. This slip sent him down to seventh place. Smith won with 144.49 points, Simaika was second with 139.79, and Herman Ringler of the Penn A. C., was third. Judges declared the diving in general was far above par, the degree of difficulty involved by the 11 divers being greater than ever before. The sum-

MASSACHUSETTS A. C. PLANS NEW BUILDING

Opens Campaign for Funds Among Alumni

Massachusetts Agricultural College of Amherst, Mass., is going to try to building. The campaign was launched at a meeting of the alumni in Boston, at which Roscoe W. Thayer, the new president of the college, was officially welcomed by the alumni.

While M. C. A. is a state institution.

While M. C. A. is a state institution, it is the intention of those conducting the plan to raise the money needed among the alumni and persons not connected with that college but interested in the cause of education. Prof. C. S. Hicks of the college, who is largely responsible for the plans for the proposed building, studied similar structures on many campuses throughout the country and from this study has incorporated into the proposed building the modern features of many.

The new building is made up of four units that are almost independent, one of another. The north wing will be the of another. The north wing will be the locker building and include the main locker room. The front central section will contain on the main floor two large rooms for class work, gymnasium classes, offices, main lobby and trophy room, coat room and public rest rooms. On the lower floor will be located the wrestling and boxing room, supply store room, towel room, laundry and repair room, drying room, dry and repair room, drying room, dressing room, showers, etc.

The swimming pool, which will measure 30 by 75 feet, will occupy the south wing and there will be accommodations for 500 spectators. The fourth section will be a dirt floor recreation hall which will measure 180 by 160ft, and be located in the rear of the central section. There will be a circular track 12 feet wide and a beloony, above the track opening out balcony above the track opening out over the central area. A sectional hardwood floor 48 by 96ft in the center of one-half of the dirt area around which bleachers are to be placed will offer a splendid opoprtunity for bas-ketball and other board floor games from Thanksgiving to spring.

The other half of the dirt area will provide space for continuance of the outdoor recreational program through the winter months. After March 1 the entire area will be available for early preparation for the spring out-of-door program.

HOCKEY PLAYERS REWARDED at its clubhouse Tuesday night and each of the players was presented with a gold medal for the fine showing which the team made this year. It was also announced that B. K. Stephenson, former Harvard varsity baseball player and captain his senior year, had been appointed chairman of the general athletic committee of the club. The committee has jurisdiction over the club's hockey, squash, goff, bowling, Badminton, swimming and billiard activities.

The Association of New England Football Officials is to hold an important meeting at the Boston Athletic Association Wednesday evening, April 11, at which Walter R. Okeson, newly appointed chief of football officials, and William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard University, will be present. The former is to explain the new system of selecting officials.

At the hotel before leaving for the Arena all the Ranger players were gathered in a meeting at which Lester

From their tactics on the ice at the start their orders must have been to play for the blg "break," which they did, and it came. After Rangers scored, the Bruins weakened their offense by sending four and sometimes five men up the ice, which paved the way for more New

The first period saw the Bruins attacking hard and the Rangers were continuously. Chances lost by the locals that might have changed the complexion entirely. From then on Rangers were hard put to hold off the locals and the period ended with Chabot having 21 stops to Winkler's 12.

Starting the third period one goal behind, Boston attacked with determination, but Rangers met them with solid body checks and Chabot handled the shots with neat dispatch. While Boston was playing four men up the ice, Murdock, Ranger spare center, broke clear and beat Winkler for the second goal at 11m. 23s. Fred Cook followed five minutes later and shot from the side where Shore had chased him, beating Winkler for the third goal. Johnson, Chabot and Boucher were easily the outstanding factors in the Ranger victory, while Hitchman played a strong game for the Bruins. The game was one of the best this season and was unusually hard played, although only eight penalties were called. Rangers were somewhat worn at the end, but will recuperate in time for the first game in Montreal Thursday. The summary:

These colorful cars for women have not arrived by chance or in the everyday humdrum routine of mass production. No, indeed. The evolution has been achieved by no casual

'Why, do you know," said a man in a handsome display whose company produces nearly half of all the automobiles sold in the United States, "we employ at large salaries men who do nothing else but evolve combinations of colors from some-thing in nature. As an instance, all of the tones in the plumage of the bird of Paradise will be included in the car; a robin will be the source of inspiration for another; the stars, the blue of the sky and a cloud form another theme. This car embodies only sea colors," and he indicated an automobile of deep ocean-green-the ocean under a dark cloud-with streamline and window trim in the pale sea-green of the edge of a white-cap, and mohair linings in the soft, warm green of the water in sun-

"Then, here is another, designed from the colors of the autumn leaves." This was an attractive two-seated sports model in rich autumnbrown, the fenders being a slightly deeper shade of the same hue, and the lining of brown leather.

"Women are appreciative of the fine details about the finish of a car, too," said the same speaker, "and the present styles in the trim of cars appeal to them." It was easy for one woman to understand the truth of that statement, for on that particby variations of the body color in the fenders and wheels, and particu-

The streamline was in very deep gray, but through the center of it ran a line of bright orange. A deep gray band extended around the

Of course, there were cars in the too-midnight blue, green that is almost black, battleship gray, deep chocolate-brown and mahogany-red; but whatever the colors, the car is finished with its full complement of the brilliant color lines as trimming. And there are many sizes and styles of cars.

The Two-Car Age "For," said this representative, "this is the two-car age. Almost any class will have two cars, and perhaps, besides, a smaller car for the daughter and a sports model for both the son and daughter. Some car owners claim it is just as economical to own two cars as one, and where the man drives himself into town every morning, the wife often has her own car for shopping and social affairs."

For 'the woman's small car there was a little beauty in Gettysburg blue. The streamline and other lin trimmings were in light gray, and the lining was a blue-gray mohair. The interior was fitted with side pocket for letters or handkerchief, a vanity case, a letter-pad for emer-gency notes, besides flower vases and

All Modes Lead to Modernism By ALIDA VREELAND

The great difference between the

YOW it is called Modernism. What will it be called 20 years old and new is the method of attack. The idea of symmetry is often comfrom now? Surely the stylists of that future time will not sanction the name "modernism," for that pletely discarded, with only balance, the fundamental of all good design, was the mode of a generation past. Cubism hardly seems correct with all the globular movements in present-day designs as well as countless other indescribable figures. One phase of this modern urge to the tenders of the modern urge definitely cast aside. Instead, each figure stands forth boldly as if to say "I sm the sum I am the moon of the modern urge." ency to idealize sun, moon and stars or earthly things has been definitely cast aside. From Vionnet came a cape-sleeve negligée of turquoise-blue and silver lamé. When the arms were raised a bat wing effect was attained, the capes being attached by seams converging to a point at the neck. Lounging pajamas are even more expressive in their use of dar-ing and original materials. Bunches of colored balloons patterned a coat of black pussy-willow taffeta bound in red with trousers of natural kakikool. A Nowitzky model has been copied in several color combinations of the word pattern which consists of one word printed in white in con-fused fashion over a background of red, blue or green. The trousers and band trimming were of the body color. An all-over design of white and gray sea gulls against a black ground made a crepe-de-chine coat. Gray trousers and coat were banded in bright yellow. A smart-looking beach pajama suit had trousers of heavy black satin, used also in the collar, cuffs and tie-belt of the finger-tip-length coat. This was of a crossword puzzle material in yellow, blue, black and white squares.

In sports clothes all modernistic themes run riot. Zodiacal dress pins are a new fad. Handled much the same as monograms, the signs of the Crab and Fish and others are embroidered at the base of the neck lines, on pockets and ties. Jane Régny has gone even further in a dress giving the impression of rain ninon forming a triangle seam under and lightning by the clever grouping the arm. HE superb quality of Whittall Anglo-Persian rugs has its origin in those far away countries where alone may be found the long, tough fibred wools from which the finest rugs and carpets are woven.

These fine wools are inspected and selected by our own trusted buyers in the foreign markets.

On arrival at the Whittall Mills, these wools are so expertly graded and blended that the yarns are both soft and resilient, strong but pliable, lustrous yet durable.

As no one kind of wool can possibly have all these essentials of quality, each Anglo-Persian rug represents a scientific mixture of wools from sources as widely scattered as Persia, India, China, South America or Scotland.

After these blended wools are cleansed, dried, carded, drawn and combed, they are ready for spinning into triple-stranded yarn.

These are preliminary steps, before the yarns are even dyed and woven into the Whittall Rugs which grace the floors of so many American homes.

Considering the care and skill employed even in the initial steps of its production, is it any wonder that the Whittall Anglo-Persian ranks high among the world's finest machinewoven rugs?

One cannot safely attach Miss Wylie's fancies to the wall with a thumb tack. In her novels people part in-evitably upon the stroke of midnight; they wear white satin and sapphires, with camellias in their hair, unless it be crisp muslin of precisely the tone of the wearer's eyes; they sit "together against a somber velvet curtain." Which is to say, Miss Wylie stoops to write only of persons and periods to which such conditions are the logical circumstances of existence.

A Wandering Poet And as to the plot, if it can be said to have one? It relates the adventure of a little wandering poet of 40, disinherited and disillusioned, returning to his native England in faint hope of reassurance; a little wizened poet of 40 who is so happy as to meet with romance in the shape

WOOL MARKET GENERALLY IS RATHER QUIET

The external appearance of the Anaco Andes wool market is one of quietness. After the milks weight of wool continues to go out to Armou Ar

For the month of February there were consumed, in condition reported, a consumed, in condition reported, a some 42,000,000 pounds of wool, including 11,000,000 pounds of carpet stock, compared with some 39,000,000 Atl & Danv 2d 4s some 10,000,000 pounds of carpet some 10,000,000 pounds of carpet B&O 181 48 48....

some 42,000,000 pounds of carpet stock, compared with some 39,000,000 pounds in January, which included some 19,000,000 pounds of carpet wools.

The machinery activity report, while showing a lessening in the activity in the looms both broad and narrow, did reveal some increase in activity in combs and spindles on worsted lines. All of which data are taken to indicate that there has been a fairly good business put through the mills.

In the West, there has been comparatively little activity during the last week. Shearing is now commencing to get under way in earnest throughout the central territory section, and will gradually spread out to the North and Northwest. So far as the present evidence is concerned, the clip seems to be coming off in fairly good condition on the whole. Growers are still holding for some very good prices for their wools.

Contracting in West

There has been some endeavor to contract wools in the bright wool sections, and more or less buying on the sheep's back is reported in the southeastern section of Iowa. Some effort to buy in Ohio and Michigan is reported but apparently with little success. Buyers do not want to pay more than 40 to 42 cents for medium wools in Ohio and Michigan, while for fine wools anywhere from 35 to 38 cents is talked according to the wool.

Sales here during the week have included some Australian and Cape fine wools anywhere from 35 to 38 cents is talked according to the wool.

Sales here during the week have included some Australian and Cape fine wools have been sought and procured at about $1.05 for average wools and tp to $1.11.2, clean hasis, and up to $1.14 is reported paid for some good length. French combing fine and fine medium. Medium wools are in demand and very firm.

Three-Eights Wools Active

The greatest activity has been in woolen descriptions from high, three-eighths quality down at very firm prices. There have been some sales of East India wools and ball China wools for clothing purposes at around 57 cents for yellow Jorias, 50 cents for ball China and 65@68c for creamy Jorias. Some No. 1 scoured Peruvian has been sold at 97@98c duty paid. the highest price yet received.

Carpet wools are stronger but not much more active. There is a disposition to await the auctions scheduled for later in the month. Noils are firm with fair demand.

Mohair is quiet here owing to light stocks, but very firm. In the country, there has been a good deal of interest shown in the sealed bid sales in Texas (clev CC&Stl. rig 5s (clev Castl. rig 5s (

IMPROVEMENT FOREIGN TRADE

Public Utility Construction Is Under Way-Ample Credit Facilities

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO OTTAWA, April 4 - An upward trend is noted in business and indus try in Canada.

The iron and steel trade is unusually busy; improvement is reported in least through April.

Bar mill orders have been only slightly behind plates. Consolidating fresh business and specifications, few weeks this year have been better. Second quarter contracting in bars has been heavier than that in plates or Judging by the bank returns at the weeks this year have been better, Second quarter contracting in bars has been heavier than that in plates or structural shares.

Chicago district fabricators specified their full first quarter contract tomage prior to the expiration of their contracts. On new heavy steel business 2 cents, Chicago, is asked, but considerable material will be delivered this month at 1.30@1.95 cents.

Sheet prices are steady in the immediate Chicago district, but to the west and southwest competition compels shading. Sheet users are buying more closely to their requirements.

Tinplate operations continue at capacity. Rall steel bar shipments, especially for concrete reinforcing, still run ahead of last year. On steel pipe, the withdrawal of a jobber discount effects a $2 a ton rise.

Increasing interest is manifested in third quarter pig iron, and some contracting is near. Cleveland pig iron, at slightly below the $18.50. Chicago furnace price, is again being sold here, and half.

Iron and steel scrap prices continue to drag, although the steel corporation has taken a tonnage out of the market. Cast iron water pipe is stronger, the range on 6 to 24-inch being $1 a ton higher at $30, to $32, Birmingham.

Steel production continues at about 192 are cent. Which its three velocities are more than ample for present the eginning of February, credit facilities are more than ample for present needs. Meantime savings have been increasing, despite the fact that the public is very much interested in investing its funds in stocks and bonds. The banks, however, have taken steps to curb speculation by reducing loans to brokers.

Improvement in the automobile in-

Steel production continues at about 93 per cent, which is three points higher than last year, although only 29 out of 36 steel works blast furnaces are active, compared with 30 a year ago. Rall mills apparently will operate at 90 per cent most of the quarter. One merchant stack at South Chicago may be blown out shortly.

Improvement in the automobile industry has further stimulated the primary iron and steel industry. The rail-roads have also placed a number of large orders which will keep the rolling mills active for some time to come. Iron and steel consumers, large and small, are finding competition keen, but the year's business to date shows in volume. Extensive de-Iron and steel consumers, large and small, are finding competition keen, but the year's business to date shows increases in volume. Extensive development in mining, the pulp and paper field, and in lumbering operations is going forward, with consequent consumption of considerable supplies of iron and steel products and mechanical equipment.

According to information supplied to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics by 6222 of the larger employers of labor throughout Canada, there was a moderate gain in employment at the beginning of March. The largest increases took place in manufactur ing, while logging, construction, min-ing and transportation were season-ally slacker. February exports of pulp and paper

YOUNG CHINESE SEEK MILITARY CAREERS

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR TOKYO-Young Chinese to the umber of 483 are seeking admission to the Imperial Military Academy in Tokyo, although only 90 will be permitted to enter. There have never been more than 30 Chinese students at the school during the 21 years that they have been admitted, and some years there were less than a half-

The explanation offered is that military career affords the quickest road to fame and fortune in China under present conditions. The Chinese who has completed a year's course at the Imperial Military Academy here, together with a halfyear's service in barracks with the Japanese army, is certain of receiving at least a major's commission upon his return to China.

Vocation

Any business or job to which one devotes the main portion of his time and by which he earns his living is called his vocation.

The Latin vocare means "to call." Obviously, a vocation is a "calling," as the Anglo-Saxons plainly expressed it. What a different aspect is put upon one's daily task, if one can truly feel he has been called or led to take up his work! Would not such a ne feel a confidence and dignity in his business, which would reassure him each day? A vocation must be distinguished from an "avocation," a calling-away, hence a diversion or minor occupation. An "avocation" is rather more serious than a "hobby," but both tend to fill the leisure one has after his regular vocation has been taken care of for the day. Happily one's vocation may be as pleasant and stimulating as his avocation

As in the similar word, "vacation," vo-ca'-tion is accented on the second syllable. Sound the o as in obey a as in cake

A Stranger Visits the Common LORRIE, pigeon of parts, as though he had placed it there was sailing lazily on her strong wings over Holmes Walk, Boston Common. Why she so sailed, no one, not even Florrie, knew. She was going nowhere and wasn't particular when she arrived. Suddenly,

She bustled up. "Stranger?" Florrie chirped.

The squirrel twanged his violin with his paw. He had a violin bow but it was stuck in his boot, and the boot itself, one his boot, and the boot itself, one of two, was worth crossing a crowded street to see—wide at the top, trim at the bottom.

Not being used to a musical answer, Florrie asked again, "Stranger to Boston Common?"

Tucking his violin under his arm, the squirrel said in a low voice, "Madam, I am always a stranger!"

and cocked one eye to show it.
"I mean," said the squirrel,
"that I am always a stranger to some, if not to others."
"Oh," said Florrie. The squirrel took off his cap by the tassel and swung it round and round, then tossed it in the air. And the strangest part of it

You can use cake and cracker boxes in which to plant seeds early in the spring. When the plants are a good size and it is warm enough to set them out, it is not necessary to disturb the roots, for the bottom of the boxes can be softened or withdrawn and the sides torn away after the box is set in the flower patch. H. C. of Batavia, N. Y., I throws a flood of light on how "Sunshine Home" in Genesee County was founded. It all grew out of the love a prosperous midwestern business man retained for the home of his boyhood. Then he opened its doors freely to young women who needed a place for rest.

Can Germany Pay Cash?

THE announcement by M. Poincaré at Carcassonne that France is ready to discuss the question of fixing the amount of German reparations was the first real official acknowledgement that the nations of the world are seriously considering the final settlement of the remaining economic problems growing out of the World War. It has long been recognized that the reparations question, despite the long step forward made by the adoption of the so-called Dawes plan, is the most uncertain and consequently the most disturbing element in the postwar problems. This has been so because no definite amount has as yet been determined for Germany to pay; only the rate of collections had been provided for in the Dawes plan.

Economists in the United States and abroad have been inclined to criticize the Dawes plan as being but a temporary expedient that would have to be modified before long. S. Parker Gilbert, the Agent-General for Reparations Payments, has given considerable thought to the problem of transfers under the plan once the maximum payments are reached. It is confessedly a serious problem because financiers recognize that those large international payments cannot be made without seriously disturbing international exchange. In the present proposal made by M. Poincaré it is suggested that in fixing the amount of German reparations provision be made for the floating of an international loan whereby Germany can raise the cash to discharge those claims immediately. In so refunding the reparations into a bond issue which would be floated in all the countries of the world, Germany would be required to set up a sinking fund and to pay interest, which would be in an annual proportion much lighter than the maximum payments called for under the

The world at large has been inclined to subscribe to this plan, which was first broached informally by Mr. Gilbert, but which was not assured of success until France indicated a willingness to subscribe thereto. In the matter of reparations payments, it must be remembered. France has been the pivotal consideration. This is necessarily so because France is more seriously economically concerned with the proper settlement of that question. It was France who forced the Dawes plan by invading the Ruhr. It is today France who opens the way for this proposed refunding of the reparations as outlined at Carcassonne.

The interests of the United States cannot be overlooked despite the fact no direct or considerable proportion of the payments will come to that country. If a bond issue is authorized no inconsiderable proportion will be floated in the United States. If the reparations are so funded at least half of the cash so raised will be paid over to France. By thus affording France the funds, a stabilization of French finances can be effected and there will be more reason on the part of France to ratify the now long-pending debt settlement with the United States. It is easily conceivable that Poincaré was well advised of the opinions of the other nations of the world before he made his address at Carcassonne and that he knew well what the American State Department would be willing to

Regulating Industrial Output

RORMULATION by a committee of the American Bar Association of proposed amendments to the federal anti-trust laws, providing that under certain conditions it shall not be illegal for producers to combine for the purpose of regulating the output of their industry, directs attention to what appears to be a world-wide movement to prevent destructive competition from which the consuming public receives little or no benefit. The great combination of British chemical manufacturers; the agreement between French, Belgian and German steel makers; the action of the European beet sugar interests to limit exports; the attempt by American coal and petroleum interests to find a remedy for overproduction, are all evidence of the recognized need for a better working basis than "the law of the jungle," the survival of the fittest. That under conditions of small-scale industries the system of free competition may have worked fairly well is conceded, but with the growth of enormous corporations or holding companies, making possible mass production on a scale undreamed of a generation ago, it is manifest that new occasions bring new duties for legislators dealing with economic conditions.

Against the desire of industry for a loosening of the restrictions imposed by the Sherman Act and other laws, there will inevitably arise the question of the public interest. It has been assumed that in the scramble for markets the aim to undersell competitors resulted in cheapening commodities to the consumer, but it by no means follows that there is any permanent reduction in prices. When by reason of greater efficiency the big concerns succeed in driving out their small competitors, the consumer is usually made to pay for the cost of industrial strife, and nobody is benefited.

As between the old-fashioned individualists, who strenuously objected to any form of government interference with private industry, and the advocates of governmental action that will aid in solving such problems as now con-front the coal and petroleum industries, pos-sibly a dividing line may be found in distinguishing between the development of what are natural resources, and ordinary manufacturing processes. The makers of shoes and sealing wax may safely be left to their present conditions of free competition, but it is becoming more and more apparent that production in important fields has outgrown the "anti-trust" laws of forty years ago.

Scotland Growing Drier

TOHN BARLEYCORN is waging a losing fight in Scotland. The conviviality which sullied the otherwise exquisite pages of Burns has greatly diminished, and if the signs are read aright the feeling toward its extinction is spreading rapidly. One sign of no little import in this respect is the rejection by the Chamber of Agriculture of the distillers' appeal for the exertion of pressure on the Government to reduce the duty on liquor. The appeal was cast in an economic mold, and was designed to show the farmers that they were losing heavily through the import of foreign liquors and the reduced consumption of home-grown barley from which whisky is made. The appeal produced exactly the opposite effect from that intended. Indeed, no regret was expressed that forty distilleries had been closed since the war, and one member of the chamber even went so far as to say that if the increased duty had made Scotland more sober, the best thing they could do would be to raise the duty by another 25 per cent. It is apparent that liquor in Scotland is falling on hard times, and that even if the climate is still wet, the country is growing drier all the time.

A Progressive Egyptian Statesman

TUSSEIN RUSHDY PASHA, president of the Egyptian Senate, was the last of the great Egyptian political figures of the forty years between British occupation and the declaration of Egyptian independence. During almost the whole of this period he played an important rôle on the Egyptian political stage, and although as a public leader Zaghlul Pasha was vastly more popular than he, the latter lacked the clear sense of political actualities which was one of Rushdy Pasha's distinguishing qualities.

When the Khedive Abbas Hilmy went to Constantinople in 1914 Rushdy Pasha was left as Regent, and the outbreak of war put him in a most delicate position, especially during the first few months while Turkey was hesitating between neutrality and joining the central

He did everything possible to persuade Abbas Hilmy to return to Egypt, warning him that, if he remained in Constantinople intriguing with the Turks and Germans, the British would certainly depose him and never allow him to return to Egypt. But Abbas Hilmy was too dazzled by the brilliant prospects held out by the Germans of being a totally independent ruler and the greatest sovereign of the Muhammadan world to listen to Rushdy Pasha's wise counsels, and eventually exactly what Rushdy had forecast happened. During the whole war, Rushdy was Premier and co-operated most loyally with the British, not only in curbing Egyptian political hotheads who would have liked to cause trouble for Great Britain, but also in giving every possible assistance to the allies from Egypt's resources, notably in regard to supplies of cotton and food and in raising the Egyptian labor corps and other units for service in Palestine, France and Mesopotamia.

Congress and Flood Control

NONGRESS is determined to have its ideas , predominate in the actual working out of the Mississippi River flood control project. These plans are grounded on the tenets of sound public policy that President Coolidge has enunciated and insisted upon in regard to the problem, tenets which are publicly acclaimed by specific inclusion in the language of the congressional act. It is the view of congressional leaders that under their program they will apply the President's excellent economics to meet the peculiar problems and exigencies to be found in the devastated Mississippi River

"It is hereby declared to be the sense of Congress that the principle of local contributions toward the cost of flood-control work . . . is sound . . ." says the Jones Bill, passed by the Senate in ninety minutes by a 70 to 0 vote and reported out to the House by its Flood Control Committee in place of its own more drastic measure by a vote of 20 to 1. This wholehearted recognition of the fundamental worth of Mr. Coolidge's recommendations is expected by congressional leaders to obtain presidential approval for their program of applying them. It is an example of the almost invariable giveand-take that is so profoundly a characteristic of legislative action, particularly on such great problems as that of flood control.

The congressional plan is intrinsically a compromise on every phase of the subject, not only between the President and Congress, but even more so between the two branches of Congress. The President advised local contribution and War Department administration of the work. The Senate in its Jones Bill, a carefully wrought compromise, recognized the President's policy in both matters, and adapted it to the needs of the situation. The several hundred million dollars that the states and communities have expended in the past for flood prevention are to be considered as their portion of the outlay for the new work; the War Department is to have an equal share with civilian executives in supervising the enterprise. The House, as proposed in the bill first recommended by the Flood Control Committee, started out to reject all of the President's recommendations. But the restraint and general sense of harmony of the Senate had immediate effect, overcoming even the personal political ambitions of some of the leaders of the Flood Control Committee. The happy result is that legislation, inherently sound, comprehensive and adequate, will be enacted, a vast engineering feat will be undertaken, and a great region of the valley will continue its valiant efforts to rehabilitate itself, hoping that it will soon be free of a constantly impending source of loss and destruction.

Aiming Toward Security Pacts

Out of the many lengthy discussions of the Security Committee at Geneva on the questions of arbitration and security, a definite plan is at last emerging. This has naturally been a slow process, for if anything was to be done it meant that nations had to think out their relations from a new point of view, as they could only obtain security in so far as they eliminated the belief that war in the final resort was a legitimate method of settling disputes.

The discussions in the committee show that the nations have not yet reached this stage. The fear of aggression is still the predominant factor in the search for security. But never before has the desire to prohibit war been more forcibly expressed than in the recent debates at Geneva. New and unexpected virtues have been discovered in the Covenant as a guarantee against war, and for those nations which require further security model treaties of arbitration, conciliation and mutual guarantee have been drafted. Thus, back to the Covenant supplemented by guarantees such as the Locarno treaties afford and not forward to the Protocol (compulsory arbitration), has become the slogan of the Security Committee. There may be nothing particularly new about the model treaties, but the fact that the representatives of more than twenty nations have unanimously approved them is a hopeful sign of the more friendly relations which exist between states which were recently enemies.

The ideal aimed at is collective pacts of guarantee by which states which view one another with suspicion may be induced to offer pledges for the maintenance of the territorial status quo in what are known as the danger spots of Europe. These may be difficult to arrange for the moment, owing to the fact that Germany and Hungary are opposed to entering into treaty arrangements which might seem to prevent the possibility of any revision of their frontiers. Germany has of course renounced all claims to Alsace and Lorraine, but she will not give the same guarantee for the maintenance of her eastern frontier, although she is pledged not to alter it by force. By suggesting that states should bind themselves in advance to avoid provocative measures and to observe an armistice if decreed by the Council of the League, Germany afforded a proof of her sincere desire to abide by this pledge. This shows that the trend of thought in Europe, as disclosed by the discussions in the Security Committee, is moving in the direction of the proposal of Frank B. Kellogg, United States Secretary of State, that war should be prohibited as an instrument of national policy.

An Opportunity for Maine Farmers

NEARLY 18,000 boys and girls were registered at the summer camps in Maine in the season of 1927, and there are excellent prospects for the registration of an even greater number in the present year. These figures indicate that the farmers of the State need to take full advantage of the market which is developing rapidly within their own borders.

Even the potato industry, already flourishing in the State, ought to be further stimulated, as it is reasonable to believe that 18,000 or more husky boys and girls, spending their days in the open, are quite capable of making an eloquent contribution to the annual consumption of Aroostook County's noted product.

There has been and still is a well organized movement in Maine to promote the sale of Maine products in Maine. Not only are the constantly increasing number of camps which dot the shores of the lakes and rivers providing an appeal for agricultural and dairy products that should not be overlooked by the farmers of the State, but here and there, all over the State, new hotels and summer residences are going up to later make their demands upon the agricultural resources of the State. If they are not met by Maine farmers the necessaries which they require will come from without the borders of their own State.

It would seem as if opportunity for Maine farmers is being spelled in capital letters and cannot be overlooked. The Maine Development Commission, acting with State authority, undoubtedly is doing a great work in stimulating and directing not only a greater agricultural production but also better methods in the home marketing of home products.

After being told by Dr. Paul R. Heyl that the world weighs 6,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons and by Dr. Miles Sherrill of Massachusetts Institute of Technology that there are 600 sextillion atoms in one gram, it is very simple for us to understand just what the astronomers mean when they say that some of the stars are 5,771,088,000,000 miles away.

Cities of Gardens By SISLEY HUDDLESTON

ALTHOUGH I traverse the Tuileries Gardens every day in a taxicab, I suddenly saw the beauty of the great quadrangle, planted with flowers, studded with statues, embellished by trees, forming an incomparable picture of urban grace, with the exquisitely proportioned buildings of the Louvre about it, and a straight alley running from the monument of Gambetta, under the great the Cornection with the state of the content of the the small Arc du Carrousel, across the Concorde, up the Champs-Elysées, to the great Arc de Triomphe set upon the rising ground against the green background of the Bois de Boulogne: I suddenly saw all this, which I had seen a thousand times before, as though for the first time. The spring sunshine had touched with fresh charm the cornices and pinnacles, the white figures on their pedestals, the budding trees. The jets of water sprang from their stone basins on which boys were sailing tiny boats. Birds were flocking about a charmer with breadcrumbs. There was joy and serenity in the whole scene.

And this was, if you please, a piece of Paris separated from one of the busiest thoroughfares in the center of the city only by an ornamental grille-which, indeed, ceased to interpose itself between park and thoroughfares at a number of points.

Then it was that I realized, as never before, that Paris is essentially a gigantic garden, in which here and there are to be found busy marts, animated boulevards, thronged residential districts. So much depends on how you look at things; and I, as I looked at them, saw the Tuileries, and the Luxembourg, and the Champ de Mars, and the Bois de Boulogne, and a multitude of other gardens, not as oases set in the midst of streets, but as a real City of Gardens, broken with little islands on which men and women might live and buy and sell and bustle to and fro.

That was doubtless a momentary impression, but nevertheless, when one comes seriously to think of Paris, one is struck by the enormous acreage of gardens. These gardens overrun into what I have called the islands—they flow over the boulevards in rows of platanes, acacias, and chestnut trees. Everywhere are square inclosures, with a few flower beds, with a statue, with wooden benches on which the women of the quarter sit knitting. They lie before and behind the churches. They surround such buildings as the ancient Musée de Cluny. Even by the clangorous railway station-by the Gare du Nord, for instancethere is a miniature park with lakes, streams, cascades.

And what is the river which winds its way but the ornamental stream of a great garden? On its banks trees and shrubs grow, dipping their branches into the spar-kling waters. The Ile Saint-Louis is a mass of greenery out of which old houses peep. Notre Dame itself on the Ile de la Cité is embowered in vegetation. Behind the statue of Henri IV, riding the city majestically on horseback, is a verdant promontory pushing into the river.

+ + + What a pleasant place in the heart of the commotion is the Palais-Royal, with its memories of the days when elegantly clad courtiers walked in its alleys! How splendid is the sweep of cultivated ground from the Trocadéro to the Ecole Militaire—a huge garden bigger than the populous quarter which spreads on either side. Again, where could one discover a livelier city street than the Boulevard Saint-Michel, the home of the Latin-Quarter students: yet the Jardin du Luxembourg would contain the whole of the Latin Quarter; and its balustraded terraces, its splendid trees, its innumerable busts of poets and painters, is perhaps the true Latin Quarter. To the east is the Jardin des Plantes, an enormous zoological and botanical garden which could easily swallow up the warehouses and commercial offices in the vicinity. You could put the entire space between the Grands Boulevards and the river—that is to say, the entire gardens.

center of Paris—into the Bois de Boulogne. Moreover, one is omitting the gardens that abound in this center itself. There it is, as big as fifteenth-century Paris, a playground with forests and lakes and rivers and fine avenues which lead to the garden suburbs. On the map of Paris a great part of the Champs-Elysées is colored green. There are green patches every-where—a green patch for the Parc Monceau amid fash-ionable houses; a green patch for the Buttes-Chaumont amid the houses of the workers; a green patch for the Parc Montsouris amid the hostels of the students of all nationalities; and then, on the southeast, another green patch bigger than the patch which indicates the Bois de Boulogne—the patch which stands for the Bois de Vincennes, the people's park.

These are only a few of the green patches, and if one looked at a larger map which shows the environs of Paris, one would be astonished at the generous use of green. There are forests at Saint-Germain, at Rambouillet, at Sceaux, at Meudon, at Clichy-sous-Bois, and a score of names conjure up pictures of gardens.

I wish some statistician would work out for us precisely how many acres in Paris are given up to houses and how many acres are given up to gardens. I wish he would further inform us what proportion of land is built upon within a radius of fifty miles from the Madeleine. I am certain that there is a greater acreage of green places than of builded spaces.

But Paris is growing. Paris, as M. Georges Benoît-Lévy remarks in an interesting book, is moving away from its own center. Hitherto the tendency has been to cluster together. Now the tendency is to spread out. Concentra-tion was the keynote. Decentralization is the mot d'ordre; satellite towns are springing up within easy reach of the city, and Parisians are looking for houses whose garden is the great countryside.

The Paris authorities know how to plan, and they are insisting that nowhere shall the approach to Paris be blocked by a mass of masonry. They demand that tracts of land shall be reserved for gardens. Beyond them, there will probably be some degree of specialization—that is to say, at one spot outside Paris will be an automobile town, at another will be a furniture town, at another will be a textile town. In other words, each of the branches of Parisian activity will be established in a satellite town. This will be the extension of the old medieval idea which in Paris itself created the Leather Workers' Street, the Iron Workers' Street, the Drapers' Street, the Locksmiths'

In this new Paris, thus disembarrassed of its industries, there will be room for the expansion of various luxury trades, of finance, of governmental and intellectual organizations. That is unquestionably the way town planning

The proposals are praised in all responsible circles. The social consequences of such decentralization are regarded with enthusiasm. The possibility of offering to workers agreeable houses to which shall be attached individual gardens should be used to combat the less pleasant features of modern civilization in the large towns.

Were Paris, as is urged, to become purely an administrative and intellectual center, enlivened by theaters and other places of recreation, and establishments which minister to the more luxurious demands of the population, were the working quarters gradually to emigrate to the countryside, then, as is pointed out, the transformation would permit the demolition of insanitary dwellings; and, the locative value of city land falling, it would be possible to plant still more gardens. Gardens, gardens, still more gardens! that is the cry. It is a cry that is not unrealizable. The projects that are made are not utopian. In the twentieth century not only Paris, but all large conglomerations, should become more and more cities of

+ + + One of Japan's national treasures, missing for a number of years, has been discovered in Berlin, where it has been offered for sale, according to a letter received from the Oriental department of the German State Museum. The treasure is the head of a demon from the Todai-ji, an eighth century Buddhist temple at Nara. The demon is being trampled under foot by a good deity, and is a wooden carving. When the head was first missed a substitute was hurriedly made, but it in no way compares with the original, which dates from about 735 A. D. The Ministry of Education, to whom the letter was addressed, is taking up the matter with the officials of Todai-ji. 4 4 4

Among the dolls displayed in the department stores and in specially erected stalls along the sidewalks for the Doll Festival this year are two newcomers. They are the Moga and Mobo. These terms are Japanese abbreviations of the English words Modern Girl and Modern Boy, and have been adopted into the language to denote those young Japanese who have forsaken the fashions of their fathers and live, dress and act according to the American or European style. The Doll Festival, which dates back many centuries, has long been of the most formal nature. A tier of scarlet-covered steps is erected in the place of honor in a Japanese home. On the upper step are placed dolls representing the Emperor and Empress, while dolls symbolizing other characters are ranged below them. Just what position little Moga and Mobo will occupy has not been determined, but it will probably vary according to the sentiments of each family.

Failure of St. Francis Dam

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

In its issue of March 14, 1928, the Stockton Independent, Calif., says: "If faulty or inferior construction is to blame, the matter should be made public to warn against further tragedies as the price of conscienceless contractors or builders." This, of course, regarding the failure of the St. Francis dam.
Other articles appearing in the public press appear to carry the implication that conscienceless contractors may have been responsible for this failure.

In view of this apparent attitude of the public press and recognizing, as we do, its influence on public opinion, we as representatives of organized contract construction would signally fail in our obligation to our members and their industry should we neglect at this time to emphasize the fact that no contractor was employed in the construction of this dam. The fact is that the structure was designed and constructed under the jurisdiction and direction of the water works department of the city of Los Angeles by the method familiarly known as "The Day Labor" system.

Under this system, the owner represented by its politically appointed board, selects the design, employs its own organization, supplies its own materials, labor and inspection and generally approves its own work.

This statement was authorized for publication by the executive board of the Associated General Contractors of America in its meeting held at the Stevens Hotel in Chicago this 19th day of March. A. D. 1928. W. A. BECHTEL, President.
